WILSON PRESENTS NEW PROPOSAL TO SETTLE THREATENED STRIKE

EIGHT HOUR DAY WITH PERIOD FOR PROBE IS PLAN

President May Refuse to Hear Final Terms of the Railroads

Confers With Lane

Brotherhoods Leave a Committee in Capital and Go Home for Strike

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—The committee of eight railway presidents, representing the more than sixty executives with whom President Wilson has been negotiating, reached the White house at 2:30 p. m., with their "final" proposal regarding settlement of the dispute with the brotherhood employees.

At the conclusion of the conference, President Holden of the Burlington said the executives would issue a statement in a short time.

"It will not be a final statement," he said, but beyond this decline to throw any light upon developments.

BY ROBERT J. BENDER
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—President Wilson on Monday presented a new proposal to the railroads of the country by which he proposes to avert the threatened final break between the roads and the railroad brotherhoods and the inevitable industrial crisis that would follow.

It was this new plan of the president's, it became known this afternoon, that resulted in deferring the conference with the railway presidents scheduled for 10 o'clock at the White house, it was likely to defer this conference again beyond the hour of 2:30, the new time set, it was indicated. It has become apparent the president did not intend to hear the so-called final terms of the railway heads, while he considers there was a possibility of obtaining radical changes in the terms.

Give Time for Investigation

From the first the president has been insistent on the eight hour day, but the proposition communicated to the railroad executives promises them all the time necessary to allow a thorough investigation of the short day's operation. The president has been willing—and in this it is learned he has been supported by the railroad employees—to let all details of the dispute with the exception of the eight hour day, be left to arbitration. Thus far, however, the roads have not acceded to this, or any other of a score of suggestions submitted to them.

Thus, it appeared probable, according to those in immediate touch with the negotiations, that the railroads will not yield to today's suggestion. The president still stands pat on his demand for concession by the railroads of the principle of the eight hour day. He is willing, however, that sufficient time should elapse before it is put into effect to enable a commission of five men to investigate and work out all details regarding the application of the shorter hour day to railroad operation—a year if necessary.

Has Legislative program

The president has determined if negotiations fail, to recommend the passage by this congress of the following measures:

A law similar to the Canadian disputes act, which averts all strikes and lockouts for one year pending the investigation by a commission of all details incident to the dispute.

An eight hour law for railroad employees—probably an amendment to the present sixteen hour law—with features covering matters of overtime and other collateral details.

Details of such legislation occupied the president, Senator Newlands, chairman of the interstate commerce committee, and Secretary

NORTH SIDE MAN LOST IN MARSH POSSE SEARCHES

Roy Carroll Wanders Away From Party And Loses Way in Swamp

Brother Directs Hunt

Painter is Missing Since Absence from Party Was Discovered Saturday Night

Splashing through the trackless waste of marsh lying on the Wisconsin side of the river across from Dresbach, a posse of twenty-five northsiders is searching for Roy Carroll, 28, 714 Charles street, a painter, who wandered away from a party of friends Saturday night, and has not been seen since. He is thought to have lost his direction in the marsh. George Carroll, his brother, is leading the searchers.

With William Kerrigan, George Kerr and a number of other young men, Carroll went to the shanty maintained up the river by the "Haba Haba club," an organization of north side young men. During the skylarking that followed their supper Saturday night, Carroll was missed. The party called and searched, but found no trace of him, although he had been with them a short time before.

After hunting far into the night, the party gave over the search until daylight, when they went at it again. In the meantime word was sent back to La Crosse, and nine others went to join the searchers last night. Sixteen others went to the place in launches this morning, but up to 2 o'clock had found no trace of the young man.

The country is entirely uninhabited, except for an occasional summer cottage along the bank of the river. For miles inland, it is low and marshy, with practically no roads. It is covered with dense undergrowth, and much of it is under water. It is one of the districts most feared by local hunters, as several have been lost there and had narrow escapes from death.

LOCAL MAN ASKS POLICE OF COUNTRY TO SEARCH FOR HIS LONG LOST SISTER

Where is Gertrude Wooden? Her brother, Harry Wooden of this city, has asked that question of the police departments of the country. He has not seen her for eighteen years—not since their mother died and Gertrude went to live with her grandfather. Here is the story:

When Gertrude was one year, the Wood family lived in Norfolk, Nebraska, and at that age her mother died. She had two brothers, Harry L. and Vern—quite a masculine family—and because three men folks are not good nurses for a year-old baby, Gertrude's grandfather, H. L. Rambe, took Gertrude home to live with him. Mr. Rambe was a stock-buyer in Nebraska, but he thought that the plumbing business would pay better, and so he moved to Minneapolis taking Gertrude with him.

Meantime Gertrude's father, W. H. Wooden, and her two brothers stayed in Norfolk, Nebraska, and letters passed back and forth from grandparents to brothers. But when Gertrude was five—that is, in 1903—the Woodens found it necessary to leave Norfolk and move to Winona, where they worked as carpenters. Desultory letters went back and forth, and although Gertrude had never seen her father and her brothers, she still knew where they lived.

In August, 1905, Grandfather Rambe wrote to Mr. Wooden at Winona proposing that the Woodens come to Minneapolis to see their little sister, "a fine girl," he said, "who wants to know her brothers." He was willing to send transportation, but somehow affairs didn't shape themselves quite right, and Harry never went. This letter was dated from 904 Twentieth Avenue, Minneapolis. Later, when Harry answered the letter, there was no reply, and he was notified that H. L. Rambe no longer lived at that address.

August, 1905, was the last time that Harry has ever heard of his sister, who must now be eighteen years old. Father and son tried several times to locate Gertrude, but with no success. Finally they turned over Grandfather Rambe's last letter to the police with instructions to make every effort to locate the missing sister. Rambe may have moved west, or perhaps back to Nebraska. Along with the letter Mr. Wooden has given the police a girlhood picture of Gertrude, the only one he has.

Mr. Wooden lives at 1226 Kane street.

Do you know Gertrude Wooden, or did you ever hear of H. L. Rambe, plumber, of Minneapolis? If you know anything about them, inform the police or Harry Wooden at once. They want to find "the fine girl" who wants to know her brothers.

ALICE WHEELER IS DEAD; NEWS WRITER WAS WIDELY KNOWN

Society Editor of Tribune Succumbed to Apoplexy at La Crosse Hospital

Had a Legion of Friends

Splendid Qualities Drew People to Her and She Enjoyed an Interesting Career

Alice Wheeler, 71, for many years society editor of The TRIBUNE, died at La Crosse hospital at 10:45 Sunday morning, following an apoplectic stroke at 5 o'clock. Miss Wheeler had been suffering for several months from bright's disease and had been almost constantly confined to La Crosse hospital since December.

The funeral will take place at 2:30 Thursday afternoon, from the parlors of the Congregational church, of which Miss Wheeler was a member. Rev. C. C. Rowilson will deliver the address.

Surviving Miss Wheeler are a sister, Mrs. F. A. Sherwood, Omaha; a niece, Mrs. Alice Baker, 1413 Farnham street; a nephew, Stephen Sherwood, Arlington, N. J.

Mrs. Sherwood is expected to arrive in La Crosse tomorrow, and will come to the residence of Mrs. Baker, whence the body has been removed from La Crosse hospital.

Alice Williams Wheeler was born in September, 1845, in Ellipticville, New York. When a child she came west with her parents, who settled first in Sparta, whence shortly they moved to La Crosse. She attained her education here and later acquired a wide acquaintance while clerking in the old "Trade Palace," for years located on the site of the present Park store.

Miss Wheeler left this employment to become society editor of the "Morning Chronicle," under the editorship of Ellis B. Usher, a position which she retained during both Mr. Usher's and Mr. Cargill's ownership of that paper. It was after years of service that the "Chronicle" was taken over by the "Leader-Press." The TRIBUNE was then a new paper in the field, and Miss Wheeler accepted the position of society editor on its staff, a position which she held with the exception of a few months from that date, some ten years ago until death claimed her.

Perhaps no other La Crosse woman was as widely known as Alice Wheeler. Her calling opened the doors of La Crosse homes to her and she made and held friends readily. Her strong intellect and breadth of view rendered her peculiarly capable, and because of her kindly disposition and pleasant approach she won a place in the collective heart of the community.

GRONNA TELLS OF PRESSURE AIMED AT BOB'S AIDES

Distinguished Citizen Does Best to Keep Dakota Senator From Wisconsin

La Follette Biggest Man

"Can Do What None of us Can Do" Declares Gronna in Interview

"You would scarcely believe what pressure is brought to bear in Washington when it gets out that one is going to do some work for La Follette," said Senator Gronna of North Dakota to a group of local progressives in the Stoddard hotel this morning, while he was waiting for a machine to take him on a two-day tour of Vernon county.

"Just before I left Washington, they sent a distinguished citizen to me. I won't give his name, but he was someone whom you would all recognize. He said he had heard I was going to Wisconsin for Senator La Follette, and when I said it was true he began to argue with me.

Worked to Stop Trip

"I won't forget that in a long time," added the senator, "this distinguished citizen worked with me for a long time, telling me what a disturber Senator La Follette is, that he is not a republican, etc.—all the threadbare things they say against La Follette. Gentlemen, I tell you the big interests are willing to go to any length to beat La Follette."

Senator Gronna said he was not in the state to tell people how to vote.

"I'm only going to bear testimony to La Follette's manhood and power," he said. "Then people can vote as they like. I'm just going to explain to the people in the state how important it is to the nation that La Follette be sent back. I want to make them see that La Follette can do what no other man of us can do—that he has the experience and the ability which make him the biggest of the progressives."

Senator Gronna left about 8:30 with Senator Otto Bosshard of La Crosse. They drove south into Vernon county to begin their two-day stumping trip at Stoddard.

The itinerary of the speakers was as follows:

Monday, Stoddard at 9 o'clock; Genoa at 11 o'clock; Chaseburg at 1:30; Coon Valley at 3:30; Esosfa at 5 o'clock; Viroqua at 7:30.

Tuesday, Folsom at 8:30; Readstown at 9:30; Viola at 10 o'clock; La Farge at 3 o'clock; Bloomingdale at 5 o'clock; Westby at 7:30.

Wednesday, with James Thompson probably added to the party, Senator Gronna and Senator Bosshard will go into Trempealeau county on a similar errand.

ATHENS, Aug. 28.—Bulgaria's advance into Greek territory and occupation Sunday of Greek forts at the Port of Kavala has brought Greece appreciably nearer to war.

No new decision has been reached by the government, but King Constantine was to hold another conference with his ministers and war chiefs Monday. Pro-ally newspapers are demanding an immediate declaration of war against Bulgaria and Germany, while the pro-German papers for the most part are silent.

Pro-ally demonstrations were held throughout Greece Sunday, centering in Athens, where ex-Premier Venizelos, leader of the Greek war party, addressed fifty thousand cheering adherents.

COMPLETE RUPTURE OF LINES OF THE CENTRAL ALLIES EXPECTED TO RESULT FROM RUMANIAN ACTIVITIES

Decision of Bucharest, It Is Believed May Draw In Greece Where Pro-Ally Demonstrations Develop

LONDON, Aug. 28.—It is officially announced that Rumania has declared war against the central powers.

Declaration on Austria, Says Berlin

BERLIN, Aug. 28.—Rumania declared war on Austria Sunday it was officially announced today.

ROME, Aug. 28.—Italy has declared war upon Germany, it was officially announced Sunday night.

BY ED L. KEEN
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

LONDON, Aug. 28.—Rumania has joined the allies with her well trained army of 600,000 men.

One official statement from Berlin Monday afternoon announced that Rumania declared war on Austria Sunday night. The French office announced that Rumania has issued a declaration of war against the central powers.

Germany will dismiss the Rumanian minister to Berlin today, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from The Hague. There is every indication that Germany will follow Rumania's action with a declaration of war before many hours.

Rumania's decision was reached at a meeting of the crown council summoned by King Ferdinand Sunday night. It came at the end of two years of anxious waiting, in which the Rumanian diplomats watched with the tensest interest the military fortunes of the allies.

Expect Greece to Enter

The Rumanian declaration is expected to signal Greece's early entrance into the war on the side of the allies.

The Rumanian third army, already mobilized within striking distance of the Hungarian frontier, is expected to invade Transylvania before the end of the week. The Rumanian general staff probably will send every available man into the invasion of Hungary in an effort to conquer the rich province of Transylvania, long coveted by the Rumanians. At the same time a strong force will be maintained along the southern Rumanian frontier to guard against attack by the Bulgarians.

Rumania's declaration is expected to be followed shortly by the opening of a great allied offensive in the Balkans that will aim to squeeze the Bulgars between two opposing forces, closing the pathway the Germans cut through Serbia to Constantinople.

Greatest Diplomatic Victory

The Rumanian entrance into the war was the greatest diplomatic achievement for the allies since the European struggle began. Dispatches from the Hague today declared that Berlin received the news calmly, though the German press blames Foreign Secretary von Jagow and Under Secretary Zimmermann for Germany's diplomatic defeat.

Stone Italian Embassy

The Berlin military authorities stationed a guard about the Rumanian legation, but there were no hostile demonstrations. A Berlin crowd vented its wrath against Italy for declaring war against Germany yesterday by stoning the Italian embassy, until police reserves arrived.

Rumania entered the war at almost the same hour that Italy declared war on Germany.

News of the allied diplomatic victory at Bucharest was hailed with the greatest enthusiasm in London.

Everywhere the view was taken that Rumania's entrance into the war means the speedy elimination of both Austria and Bulgaria from the conflict.

Austrians Squeezed

Squeezed between the victorious Russian and Italian armies, the Austrians now find themselves forced to defend their eastern border from attack at a moment when they lack the Russian and Italian fronts. Allied military experts are confident that Germany will be unable to send any reinforcements to the hard pressed Austrians, without inviting disaster on both the Russian and Anglo-French fronts.

Some critics see as a result of Rumania's action the cutting off of Bulgaria and Turkey from communication with their Austro-German allies and their surrender under economic and military pressure before the end of the present year.

Italy Gives Reasons

ROME, Aug. 28.—Italy declared war on Germany because Germany sent both land and sea forces to the aid of Austria, enabling her to concentrate her maximum efforts against Italy, said an official statement issued here Monday.

A similar statement was forwarded to the German foreign office through the Swiss government, setting forth the reason for the declaration of war yesterday.

Think Lightly of Italy

BERLIN, Aug. 28.—Italy's declaration of war against Germany will have no influence at all upon the military situation, German military critics declared Monday.

They dismissed Italy's action lightly, pointing out that General Cadorna has been unable to make important progress in fifteen months fighting against the Austrians, and that he will scarcely have any more success if he sends troops to other fronts to oppose the Germans.

This station is one of the busiest of the government's fish stations along the Mississippi, and is growing in importance each year.

An unusually large amount of timothy seed has been threshed. Henry Klinge near Farmersburg has a return of 9,460 bushels of oats, wheat, barley and timothy from 200 acres. J. The McGregor Sunday schools will be represented at the Clayton County Sunday School association at its annual meeting to be held in the new Methodist church at Edgewood September 15 and 16. W. D. Stem, secretary of the State Sunday School association, will be present.

Mr. Chalmers, head designer for the Pickard Clune Decorating company of Chicago, has been in McGregor sketching the scenery of the hills and river. He is an enthusiast over the beauties of the proposed national park site and made a number of views to use in his decorative work.

In a speech in the United States senate on the proposed national park at McGregor, Senator Kenyon a few days ago gave a fine word picture of the scenery and historic interest of the region. He intimated that he was ready to pay out of his own pocket the cost of a federal investigation of the merits of the project. The bill which Senator Kenyon was successful in getting through the senate for an appropriation of $500 to send a representative here was turned down in the house of representatives on a point of order. Senator Kenyon immediately introduced a second bill and is hopeful that an investigation may yet be made this season.

CHARGE POLICE "MILKED" AGED MILLIONAIRE

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—How city detectives helped in the "milking process" of Edward Morrison, 80 year old millionaire, will be new evidence offered in the federal receivership proceedings against him next week, according to officials Saturday.

Much of this evidence will be supplied by sixty letters recovered in the receiver's search of the Morrison home. Other parts of it will be pieced together by Barney Bertsche, former head of Chicago's clairvoyant trust, and John Somers, jeweler. Stories of fake telegrams, messages from Hong Kong, China, mailed from here, will also be a part of the evidence.

Sommers declared the detectives had a system in working Morrison. "They would 'dope' out a story about stolen bonds, Morrison didn't know whether he had the bonds or not and would fall for the story," said Sommers.

Worm Will Turn

A lady was continually accusing her servant of extravagance without any real cause. The servant always bore this accusation patiently.

One day the servant informed her mistress that the coal had all been consumed. This was followed by the usual remark on the part of the mistress, "You finished up by saying: 'You evidently eat it!'"

The next day the candles were all gone.

"Candles gone!" said the mistress. "Why I bought half a pound only a fortnight ago."

"Oh, Well," rejoined the now disgusted servant, "I can tell you where the candles have gone. I ate them to grease my throat, so that I could swallow the coal more easily!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

"Else you would not have taken it, eh? Anything like apples, for instance, is quite under the ban."

"Yes, indeed," smiled Lark. "We are too old to steal apples."

"Of course," added Carol. "When we need our neighbor's apples, we send Connie. And get nicely punished for it, too, I promise you."

"Quite so! And this exquisite board?"

"Well, we've found a perfectly gorgeous place up in the old tree where we can make a seat. It's quite a ways out from the trunk, and when the wind blows it swings splendidly. But it isn't very comfortable sitting on a thin limb, and so we want a seat. It's a fine place, I tell you. We thought you could nail this securely on to the limbs—there are two right near each other, evidently put there on purpose for us. See what dandy big nails we have!"

"From the Avery's woodshed, I suppose," he suggested, smiling again.

"Oh, they are quite rusty. We found them in a sack in an old barrel. It was in the scrap heap. We're very good friends with the Averages, very good, indeed," she continued hastily. "They allow us to rummage around at will—in the barn."

"And see this rope," cried Carol. "Isn't it a dandy?"

"Ah! The Avery barn must be inexhaustible in its resources."

"How suspicious you are, Jerry," mourned Lark.

"I wish we were that way, instead of innocent and bland and trustful. Maybe we would get rich, too. This is the first time I ever really understood how you came to be a success in business."

"But you are quite wrong this time," said Lark seriously. "Old Mr. Avery gave me this rope."

"Yes, he did! Lark told him she was looking for a rope just exactly like this one, and then he gave it to her. He caught the idea of philanthropy right away. He's a very nice old gentleman, I tell you. He's so trusting and unsuspicious. I'm very fond of people like that."

"We thought when you had the board nicely nailed on, you might rope it securely to the limbs above. They are in very good position, and that will make it absolutely safe. Do you suppose you can do that, Jerry? Do you get seasick when you climb high?"

"Oh, no, high altitudes never make me seasick. I've a very good head for such purposes."

"Then suppose you get busy before it grows dark. We're in a great hurry. And we do not want Connie to catch us putting it up. I'll be such fun to sit up there and swing when the wind blows, and have poor Connie down beneath wondering how we manage to stick on. She can't see the seat from the ground. Won't it be a good joke on her?"

"Oh, very—yes, indeed—Well, let us begin—Now, observe! I will just loop this end of the rope lightly about my—er—middle. The other end will dangle on the ground to be drawn up at will. Observe also that I bestow the good but rusty nails in this pocket, and the hammer there. Then with the admirable board beneath my arm, I mount to the heights of—Say, twins, didn't I see an old buggy seat out in the barn today? Seems to me—"

"Oh, Jerry!" The twins fairly smothered him. "Oh, you darling. You are the nicest old thing—Now we can understand why Prudence seems to like you. We never once thought of the old buggy seat! Oh, Jerry!"

Then they hastily brought the discarded seat from the barn, and with the help of Jerry it was shoved up on the woodshed. From there, he lifted it to the lowest limb of the old maple, and a second later he was up himself. Then it was lifted again, and again he followed—up, and up, and up—the loose end of the donated rope trailing loose on the ground below. The twins promptly—as promptly as possible, that is—followed him into the tree.

"Oh, yes, we'll come along. We're used to climbing and we're very agile. And you will need us to hold things steady while you hammer."

And Jerry smiled as he heard the faithful twins, with much grunting and an occasional groan, follow in his wake.

It was a delightful location, as they had said. So heavy was the leafy screen that only by lifting a branch here or there, could they see through it. The big seat fitted nicely on the two limbs, and Jerry fastened it with the rusty nails. The twins were jubilant, and loud in their praises of his skill and courage.

"Oh, Jerry," exclaimed Carol, with deep satisfaction, "it's such a blessing to discover something really nice about you after all these months!"

"Now, we'll just—"

"Hush!" hissed Lark. "Here comes Connie. Hold your breath, Jerry, and don't budge."

"Isn't she in on this?" he whispered. He could hear Connie making weird noises as she came around the house from the front. She was learning to whistle, and the effect was ghastly in the extreme. Connie's mouth had not been designed for whistling.

"Sh! She's the band of a dark-browed gypsies trying to steal my lovely wife."

"I'm the lovely wife," interrupted Carol complacently.

"But Connie does not know about it. She is so religious she won't be any of the villain parts. When we want her to be anything real low-down, we have to do it on the sly. She would no more consent to a band of dark-browed gypsies than she would."

Connie came around the corner of the parsonage, out the back walk beneath the maple. Then she gave a gleeful scream. Right before her lay a beautiful heavy rope. Connie had been yearning for a good rope to make a swing. Here it lay, at her very feet, plainly a gift of the gods. She did not wait to see where the other end of the rope was. She just grabbed what she saw before her, and started violently back around the house with it yelling, "Prudence! Look at my rope!"

Prudence rushed around the parsonage. The twins shrieked wildly, as there was a terrific tug and heave of the limb beside them, and then—a crashing of branches and leaves. Jerry was gone!

It did look horrible, from above as well as below. But Jerry, when he felt the first light twinge as Connie lifted the rope, foresaw what was coming and was ready for it. As he went down, he grabbed a firm hold on the branch on which he had stood, then he dropped to the next, and held again. On the lowest limb he really clung for fifteen seconds, and took in his bearings. Connie had dropped the rope when the twins screamed, so he had nothing more to fear from her. He saw Prudence, white, with wild eyes, both arms stretched out toward him.

"O. K., Prue," he called, and then he dropped. He landed on his feet, a little jolted, but none the worse for his fall.

He ran at once to Prudence. "I'm all right," he cried, really alarmed by the white horror in her face. "Prudence! Prudence!" Then her arms dropped, and with a brave but feeble smile, she swayed a little. Jerry took her in his arms. "Sweetheart!" he whispered. "Little sweetheart! Do—do you love me so much, my dearest?"

Prudence raised her hands to his face, and looked intensely into his eyes, all the sweet loving soul of her shining in her own. And Jerry kissed her.

The twins scrambled down from the maple, speechless and cold with terror—and saw Prudence and Jerry! Then they saw Connie, staring at them with interest and amusement.

"I think we'd better go to bed, all three of us," declared Lark sturdily. And they set off heroically around the house. But at the corner Carol turned.

"Take my advice and go into the woodshed," she said, "for all the Averages are looking out of their windows."

Prudence did not hear, but he drew her swiftly into the woodshed. Now a woodshed is a hideously unromantic sort of place. And there was nothing for Prudence to sit on. So that Jerry might kneel at her feet. So they dispensed with formalities, and he held her in his arms for a long time, and kissed her often, and whispered sweet meaningless words that thrilled her as she listened. It may not have been comfortable, for it was evidently endurable, for it is a fact that they did not leave that woodshed for over an hour. Then they betook themselves to the darkest corner of the side porch—and history repeated itself once more!

MR. JACKSON TO MR. MAXCEY

In the course of his address at Yeoman hall Friday evening Senator La Follette said:

"Phillip has destroyed that (the railroad) commission. It has in it now two men who by affiliation and long service are servants of the corporations. Take Carl D. Jackson of Oshkosh. He was a lawyer, and his clients were the utilities of the district. Granting his honesty, Mr. Jackson's connections were such as to unfit him for service on the commission. And then Phillip had the audacity to go to the railroad offices in Milwaukee and get Walter L. Alexander, a man who has that conception of public service is not fit to be charged with administration."

Perhaps a fuller light may be shed upon what Senator La Follette meant by reference to a letter signed by Carl D. Jackson, Phillip appointee to the railroad commission, read by Francis E. McGovern at the court house Thursday night. A citizen named Boldt had made complaint to the commission about certain conditions in the service of the Antigo Gas company and the Antigo Electric Light company. The Jackson letter was addressed to W. G. Maxcey, of Oshkosh, a public service operator, presumably interested. As read by Mr. McGovern, the letter follows:

Mr. W. G. Maxcey,
Algoma Block,
Oshkosh, Wisconsin:
My dear Maxcey:

I am inclosing a statement rendered me by the statistical department after going over the files relating to the Antigo Gas company and the Antigo Electric Light company. It seems that the thing is all mixed up and that it is very difficult to determine just what the legal rates are. It does not appear that the City Gas company has filed any schedule of rates. I suggest that if it meets with your approval you file. If you do not care to file a rate schedule, at least rules in regard to minimum bills and reconnection charge, for our approval. Suppose you put in a minimum bill of sixty cents gross, and fifty cents net per month, as a minimum charge, and a reconnection charge of one dollar. I understand from Mr. Erickson that you are now considering the question of gas rates there and perhaps do not care to go into that question at this time, but it would seem that if a rule were filed we could approve it at once. Would not this clear up the situation in regard to Emily Boldt or others in like situation? If this does not meet your approval and I am misunderstanding the situation, let me know and I will try to fix up the matter satisfactorily.

Yours very truly,
CARL D. JACKSON.

P. S.—Under the present situation would we not have to ask you to reconnect?
C. D. J.

Remember that this is your commissioner of public service corporations writing to an officer of such a corporation. How do you like it? Do you want Mr. Phillip to appoint still more commissioners?

THE SENTINEL'S CONSISTENCY

Claims of President Wilson's advocates that "he kept us out of the war" deserve the thoughtful consideration of every unbiased voter. That sounding phrase, however pleasing it may be to those who regard a state of peace as worth almost unlimited sacrifices, will not convince a careful thinker unless it stands up when analyzed.

The same catchword rather begs the question by assuming that the United States was in real danger of war in the course of the Wilson administration. The probability of anything of the kind may well be doubted after a review of all the facts, in spite of the speciously threatening attitude that the government assumed toward Mexico and toward Germany at various times.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

The Milwaukee Sentinel has been one of the most vigorous advocates of a stupendous "preparedness" program for the United States. It has been charged that an industrial influence dominated this big army and navy idea. However, friends of the Sentinel may have presumed that alarm for the safety of the nation was the basis.

But now comes the Sentinel with the assertion that the United States has been in no danger of war. If there has been no such danger in the last two years, when in all creation may we expect to be in jeopardy? If there is no chance of us being drawn into the war-mad whirlpool seething in Europe, if the desperation of Mexico's would-be rulers was no menace, where shall we go to look for trouble?

"Consistency, thou art a jewel", not found in the Sentinel CROWN.

Quips and Cranks and Wanton Wiles

Gladness
There's a gladness of the spirit
When we've won some mortal height
While the others struggled near it
But fell out before the light
There's a gladness in the triumph
But all other joy above
Is the gladness that we treasure
When we're happy in our love.

All the world's divine bravuras,
All the shouts of song and glee,
Are as nothing to the beauty
Of the heart's own minstrelsy;
All the gladness and the sunshine,
All the wonder life may know,
Are as nothing to the gladness
That by love is made to glow.

There's a gladness of possession,
Of the sense of owning things,
Of the wealth in which one triumphs
As to fortune's skirts he clings;
But the gladness that grows sweeter
As the years grow gray as dove,
Is the gladness of the spirit
When the heart is full of love.
—Baltimore Sun.

Out of the Mouths of Kids
School children know a great deal more than they used to do. In fact, some of them, in their own opinions at least, are quite capable of tutoring their tutors.

"Those kiddies I teach are as knowing as an encyclopedia," said a teacher recently.

"In what way?" asked his friend.

"Well," replied the scholastic person, "the other day I set a problem in arithmetic: 'A rich man dies and leaves a million pounds. One-fifth is to go to the wife, one-fifth to his son, one-eighth to his brother and the rest to the hospitals. What does each one get?'"

"Yes?" queried the friend, not very interested.

"Back came the reply from the smallest boy in the class: 'A lawyer, sir.'"

Mebbee
There was a certain bishop who had a pleasant habit of chatting with anybody he might meet during his country walks. One day he came across a lad who was looking after some pigs by the roadside, and the bishop paused, ask him what he was doing, that being his usual opening to conversation.

"Moindin' swine," the lad replied, stolidly.

The bishop nodded his head thoughtfully.

"Ah, is that so?" he commented. "And how much do you earn a week?"

"Two shillins," was the reply. "Only two shillings?" remarked the bishop. Then he continued, pleasantly, "I too, am a shepherd, but I get more than two shillings."

The lad looked at him suspiciously for a minute, then he said, slowly: "Mebbee you gets more swine nor me to mind."—Tit-Bits.

The New Method
Backache of any kind is often caused by kidney disorder, which means that the kidneys are not working properly. Poisonous matter and uric acid accumulate within the body in great abundance, over-working the sick kidneys, hence the congestion of blood causes backache in the same manner as a similar congestion in the head causes headache. You become nervous, despondent, sick, feverish, irritable, have spots appearing before the eyes, bags under the lids, and lack ambition to do things.

The latest and most effective means of overcoming this trouble, is to eat sparingly of meat, drink plenty of water between meals and take a single anuric tablet before each meal for a while.

Simply ask your favorite druggist for anuric if you aren't feeling up to the standard. If you have lumbago, rheumatism, dropsy, begin immediately with this novel treatment.

Only Washington Square was partially saved from this invasion. Its pretty park and the quaint charm of some of the old houses attracted the artist folk as did also the low rents. So the old and storied homes became studios and queer little shops and restaurants were opened in the basements, and Washington Square became the official Bohemia, the Latin Quarter of New York; and that it has remained. Tom Paine starved and died there; Mark Twain and Stevenson sat and tailed in the Square every morning for a long time. O. Henry came there when he was a struggling contributor to the cheap magazines. NEWS NOTES from MOVIELAND
- - - DAISY DEAN - - -

This is a scene from the much advertised million-dollar Annette Kellermann picture, "A Daughter of the Gods." It will be seen in this city.

This is to introduce Clarence J. Harris, chief actor in a little vocalized drama entitled, "From Ministry to the Movies; or How I Gave Up Sermons for Scenarios."

Mr. Harris used to worry over Proverbs. Now he worries over plots for new scripts to be screened by William Fox directors, for Mr. Harris is one of the hardest of the staff of Fox scenario writers. Our hero quotes the Bible as saying: "He who does not provide for his family is worse than infidel."

"I do not want to be in such a class," he says, "and I could not avoid doing so if I kept up my pastoral work. So I began writing 'scripts.'"

Mr. Harris is forty three years old, and left the ministry after twenty years of active work. In the last three years that he has been writing scenarios he has sold 275 reels to more than fifteen different producing companies. Now he lives in a comfortable Washington Heights apartment in New York city.

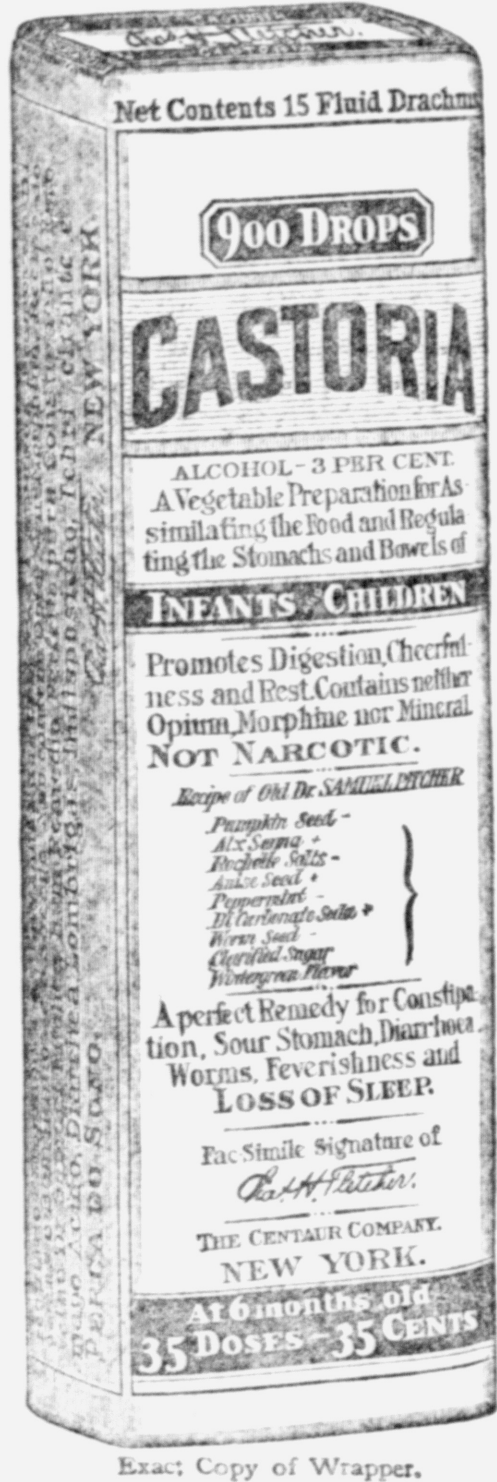

Herbert Brenon, who directed the William Fox picture, "A daughter of the Gods," starring Annette Kellermann, has sued the Fox company for $500,000, declaring he has been damaged.

Max Linder, the European film comedian, is coming to America under contract with the Essanay company, according to advices from Paris. He is said to have been signed on a long term contract by George K. Spoor, head of Essanay.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory." Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place." Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent." Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's." Dr. Wm. J. McCann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home." Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy." Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

THE HASKIN LETTER

HOW MOVIE MONEY MOVES

By Frederic J. Haskin
NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—It becomes readily apparent to the most casual inquirer here that the motion picture business is passing through a parlous and troubled phase of its spectacular career. No one conceals the fact. Men connected with the business end of the big film companies say that few of them have made any money upon their investments for the last two years. They assert that the business faces the need for a sweeping reorganization.

Immense sums of money have been poured into the movie business, wherever this wealth is going, it is certainly not returning to the investors.

The exhibitors will earnestly tell you that they are not getting it either. Regulations growing out of the infantile paralysis plague have made it necessary for many houses here in New York to close their doors. It has also affected them in other parts of the country. But that is not the only difficulty. The price of film has steadily risen. Many a small exhibitor who once paid only fifty dollars for a week's program is now paying that much for the releases of a single night.

If you continue your investigations and approach the actors on the same subject, you will likewise find some dissatisfaction. Salaries among the regular motion picture folk are beginning to go down, and show a prospect of going down still more.

This, of course, does not apply to the moving picture stars, who are the most handsomely remunerated on earth. They get salaries that the state could never touch, and they get them by yearly contract, not by the engagement, which may end at any time. Charlie Chaplin with his ten thousand dollars a week, Mary Pickford with her fabulous income, and a number of lesser luminaries with salaries ranging from one to five thousand dollars a week, are certainly not feeling hard times. If they chose to be spenders, the Prince of Wales could not keep them in sight. Corporation presidents are underpaid by comparison.

These stars, however, are not many. The majority of the people who make the movies are not overpaid. Leading parts are played by men and women who earn from one to two hundred dollars a week—quite competent actors and actresses who have not happened to achieve any great vogue, but whose work is nevertheless very acceptable both to the companies and the public. The innumerable lesser parts pay still less money, the remuneration ranging down to the dollar and a half a day people who make up the crowds and armies.

But there is today in the movie world another, and at this time it would seem, a crucial element. It is commonly referred to among the movie folk as "the Broadway people." The Broadway people, you must understand are the actors and actresses from the legitimate stage who have invaded the movies, and carried away from them large quantities of money—just now very much needed. The regular movie actors say that Broadway people are "killing the game." The directors admit that the

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if you feel Backachy or have Bladder trouble.

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sour, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

Broadway people must go before the business will again be on a safe and sound financial footing. The only ones that are not eager for Broadway and the movies to be divorced are the Broadway actors themselves.

You can always get a Broadway star to do a part in a film for about four times the price of a regular movie actor—and do it worse," explained one director.

Of course, there are exceptions to the last part of this statement. Some of the Broadway people have been conspicuously successful in the movies. Likewise, some of the films they have made never appeared on the screen.

There are no exceptions to the high prices, however. A couple of years ago, when the big companies were making a thousand per cent upon their investments, and were ready to buy anything in the world that would boom the business, they began to cost covetous eyes and alluring offers toward Broadway.

Now the Broadway people were strongly allured by the offers. Despite the large size of the stage salaries, acting upon the legitimate state is one of the most poorly paid professions in the world. Even an actor of high ability is lucky if he is employed half the time. In case a play fails, he may actually lose money, having gone through the rehearsals without pay and invested a lot of money in costumes.

To the followers of this uncertain calling, a yearly contract at an immense salary looked almost unbelievably good.

But the actors had the dignity of their profession to think about. The dignity of the theatrical profession is one of the most immense and amazing things in the world. An actor will remain idle for years rather than take any part which is below his own estimate of himself. So the stage folk scorned the movies, and the bids for their assistance kept going.

Then Sarah Bernhardt—the divine, the supreme Sarah, who is everything that an actress should be both to the public and the profession—signed a contract with a great motion picture company and made several most successful films.

Needless to say, the season opened there and there. The Broadway people entered filmland like sheep going through a gate. And the money that came to meet them was something stupendous. Billy Burke is said to have received $140,000 for making a single serial. Geraldine Farrar is reputed to have made $2,000 a week. Such near-great ones as Ethel Barrymore, Anna Held and Dustin Farnum are said to have been paid in the vicinity of $1,000 a week each. E. H. Southern, who is now making three pictures for one of the big companies, is said to receive $2,500 a week. Mrs. Fiske, Mabel Taliaferro, Douglas Fairbanks and Olga Petrova are some of the other well known ones that have made the change. A host of lesser ones followed. A leading man who had been on Broadway for many years, but had never achieved any national reputation—or anything approaching affluence—easily got a contract for $550 a week. The leading lady who plays opposite him, often having the more important part, and who grew up in the movies, receives $100.

So the Broadway people have all received the salaries of movie stars, and they have been almost as numerous as real stars on a clear night. They explain where a large part of the tremendous movie investment has gone.

Taken from the legitimate stage has not been the only extravagance of this lusty young industry, however. Keen competition between a number of strong companies, all, up to a few years ago, earning immense sums, has led to lavish expenditure in all lines. For example, a few years ago, settings were made up with the help of paint and papier-mache, but without much expense. Now there is a passion for the genuine among directors who fairly out-Belasco Belasco. Real carved doors, genuine antique andirons, sets of real "period" furniture, genuine tapestries, are bought for single settings. At least one of the big companies has an employee whose only duty is to attend auctions and house sales, and spoke about the antique and second hand stores in search of the rare and expensive bits that will give an authentic touch to the pictures.

Crowds, too, have grown in size at an alarming rate. A few years ago a great battle scene would be enacted with the help of perhaps a hundred supers, who would charge across the scene again and again. Now thousands are often used. At one to five dollars apiece, they represent a formidable investment.

Directors' salaries are another soaring item. Where a couple of hundred used to be a high weekly stipend, twelve hundred is not unusual now. And the chief art of this important functionary seems to be to devise new ways of spending money—although devising ways of saving it is apt to become his forte in the near future.

A brilliant young director was recently given charge of the making of a fanciful film with a tropical setting. He forthwith journeyed to a tropical island, taking hundreds of people with him. Having found a suitable and perfectly authentic setting, he proceeded to build a whole city and hire a native population for it. Then he went ahead with his picture. The president of the company became alarmed at the bills, took the first boat for the island and threatened the director with discharge, demanding that he surrender the script of the scenario at once. The director explained that the script was all inside his head. So they had to let him finish the picture, which he did at a total expense of $750,000. Then they fired him—and a rival company hired him at a larger salary.

But they all agree that this gay business is about over, that the motion picture industry has passed through its first youth, and sowed its wild oats. The headache and the debts are now coming on, and a period of hard, solid and conservative endeavor.

One encouraging symptom is that the companies are paying more and more for their ideas. It has been widely charged that the movies have been monuments of physical extravagance and perfection, with very little brains back of them. The banal sentimentality, the slap-stick farce, the spectacle emphasizing mere bigness for its own sake, devoid of taste and idea, have had a large part in the film production. But more and more pictures are appearing that merit the consideration of the most critical, and there is every reason to believe that the elevation of the cinema-play toward a real artistic standing will go on apace. The scripts were bought for ten to fifty dollars a few years ago, by even the best companies; these are now paying $250 to $1,000 for their scenarios. The directors proclaim that real ideas and real dramatic values are what they seek. As soon as they learn to find them, we may expect motion pictures of a new type.

As for the financial situation of the motion picture industry, the men that know, say it will be saved only by extensive reorganization. Not only are the days of extravagant expenditure over; but the system of booking releases must be changed. Immense sums are now wasted by the maintenance of rival offices in all the principal cities. A system of co-operative clearing houses will probably be an important feature of business in the future. The business will pay a smaller and a more certain return, and produce a less extravagant and more interesting picture.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

SAYS HOT WATER WASHES POISONS FROM THE LIVER

Everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it, before breakfast.

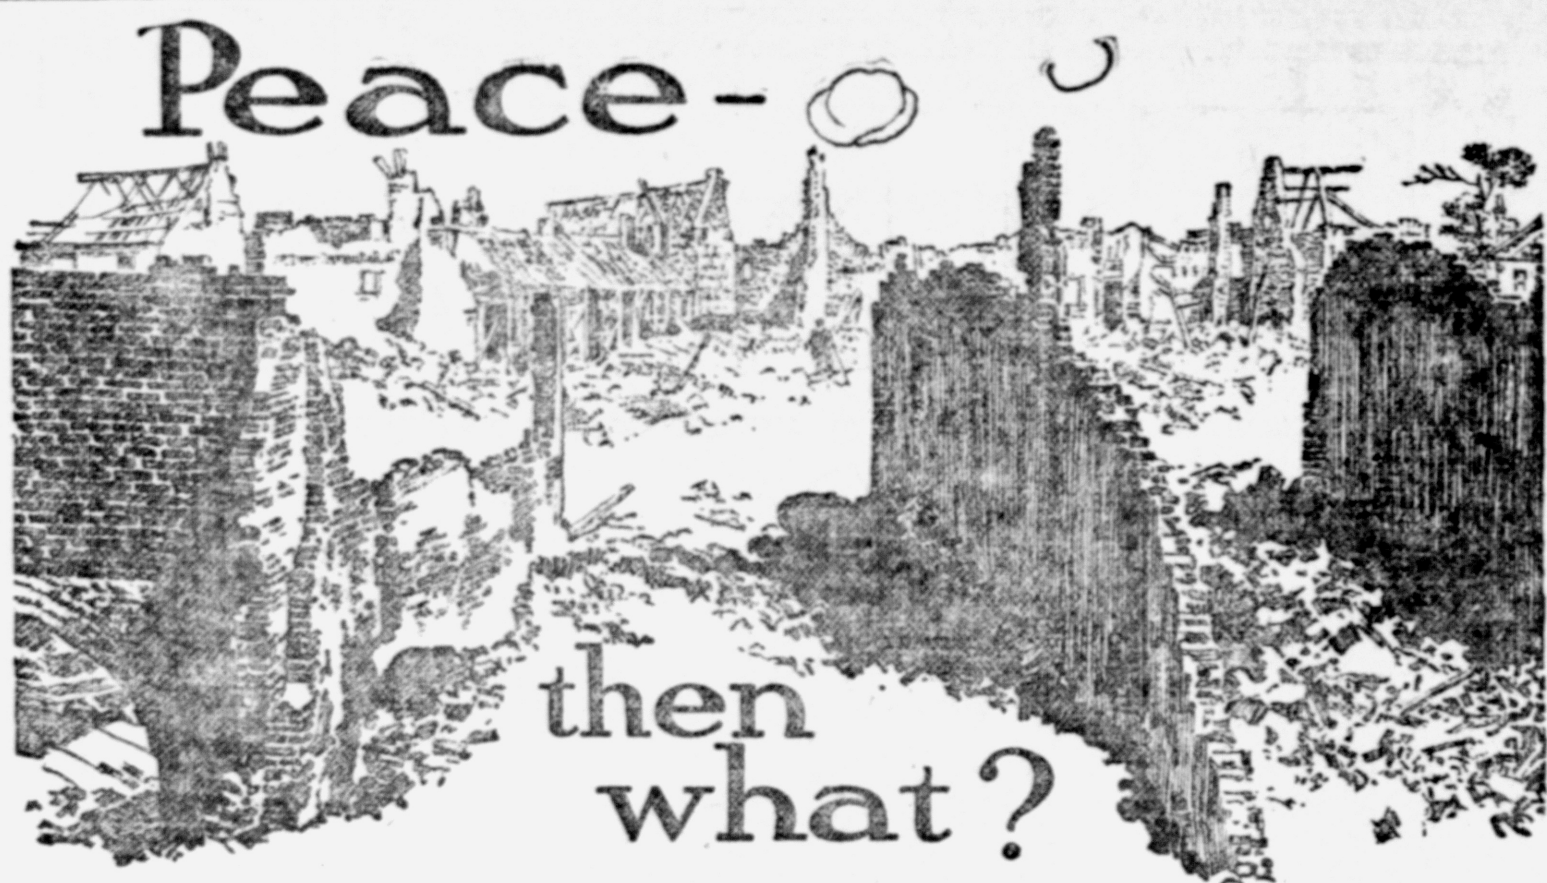

To feel as fine as the proverbial fiddle, we must keep the liver washed clean, almost every morning, to prevent its sponge-like pores from clogging with indigestible material, sour bile and poisonous toxins, says a noted physician.

If you get headaches, it's your liver. If you catch cold easily, it's your liver. If you wake up with a bad taste, furred tongue, nasty breath or stomach becomes rancid, it's your liver. Sallow skin, muddy complexion, watery eyes all denote liver uncleanness. Your liver is the most important, also the most abused and neglected organ of the body. Few know its function or how to release the dammed-up body waste, bile and toxins. Most folks resort to violent calomel, which is a dangerous, salivating chemical which can only be used occasionally, because it accumulates in the tissues, also attacks the bones.

Every man and woman, sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, to wash from the liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, the poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Limestone phosphate does not restrict the diet like calomel, because it can not salivate, for it is harmless and you can eat anything afterwards. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, and any pharmacist will sell you a quarter pound, which is sufficient for a demonstration of how hot water and limestone phosphate cleans, stimulates and freshens the liver, keeping you feeling fit day in and day out.

Certain-teed Roofing

will play a leading role; for CERTAIN-TEED is the twentieth century answer to the demand for roofing that is economical to buy, easy to lay and inexpensive to maintain.

CERTAIN-TEED Roofing is made in rolls; also in slate-surfaced shingles. There is a type of CERTAIN-TEED for every kind of building, with flat or pitched roof, from the largest skyscraper down to the smallest residence or out-building.

It makes a clean, attractive roof, with a very low cost per year of life. It is guaranteed for 5, 10 or 15 years, according to ply (1, 2 or 3). Experience proves that it lasts the period of guarantee.

The long life of CERTAIN-TEED is due to the quality of the roofing felt and the character of the asphalt saturation. This is a blend of soft asphalts prepared by the General's board of expert chemists. The highest quality roofing felt is thoroughly saturated with this soft blend, and is then coated with a blend of harder asphalts, which prevents the drying-out process so destructive to ordinary roofing.

If you are interested in roofs, investigate CERTAIN-TEED before you decide upon the type to buy. You will find CERTAIN-TEED for sale by responsible dealers all over the world.

Concert Sunday Night

Sessions Close With a Program of Singing by Choirs From Many Towns

With one hundred fifty delegates and singers, and eight pastors present the fourth annual convention of the People's League and Choral Union of the La Crosse Circuit, United Norwegian Lutheran church, closed an unusually successful series of meetings at the St. Paul Lutheran church, Twelfth and Division streets, last evening. Delegates were present from Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Began Saturday

Two meetings were held Saturday, and three Sunday. The session of Saturday afternoon was largely devoted to business. The opening service was held Saturday evening and included an address by Rev. Andrew Boe of Blair, and a speech of welcome by Rev. O. C. Myhre. A reception was held after the meeting.

The service Sunday morning was held in Norwegian, the sermon being delivered by Rev. O. C. Myhre of Coon Valley. An English service was held in the afternoon, the principal addresses being a paper by Stephen Gylund, "The Right Relation Between the Young People and the Pastor," and an address by Professor J. F. Grose of Northfield, Minnesota, "Christian Education."

The sacred concert Sunday evening was the crowning feature of the convention. The program follows: Devotion, Rev. H. J. Magelsen. Choral—"Kirken den er et gam-

The officers were re-elected: President, Rev. E. O. Hofstead, Virgona; vice-president, O. C. Nelson, La Crosse; secretary, Rev. O. C. Myhre, Coon Valley; treasurer, Rev. Alfred Forness, Winona; musical director, Rev. Andrew Boe, Blair.

Resolutions were adopted giving "thanks to God for his manifold blessings, showered upon the organization," and thanking the officers and members of the La Crosse society and the members of the St. Paul congregation for their hospitality. Thanks was also tendered the local press for their interest.

The meetings of the society crowded the church to its full capacity.

Insanity and Pyromania.

It used to be considered a possibility for an insane person to be a pyromaniac and exhibit his insanity in no other way than by setting fire to places, but this has been disproved, so much so that any firebug who pretends to be a pyromaniac must have other insane impulses or he cannot pass muster among alienists as permitted to swindle insurance companies with pretense of incendiary irresistible inclination.—Washington Post.

H. R. & T. LEAGUE BANQUET A FROST

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 28.—The much heralded Home Rule and Taxpayers' league banquet, which was to have 300 guests here Friday night, turned out to be a frost. There was exactly 76 in attendance. Even the long program of speakers did not come—Judge John C. Karel of Milwaukee announced as a speaker did not come; Daniel W. Grady of Portage did not come; Former Congressman J. W. Murphy of Platteville did not come; Thomas Kearney of Racine did not come and there were others who did not come. But Harry Bolens of Port Washington was there; T. C. Richmond of Madison was there; James Clancey of Stoughton was there, so were John M. Whitehead and M. G. Jeffris of Janesville. The opening speech of the evening was made by Mr. Richmond. He told of the work of the league and then he announced:

"I am going to speak out on this subject of candidates. Every man on the ticket lead by Governor Philipp can be safely trusted and voted for. Mr. Jeffris, who is a candidate for the United States senate, has been heart and soul with us in this organization. You can safely vote for him."

Senator John M. Whitehead of Janesville said that the commissions of the state ought to be reconstructed. He said that the policy of regulation now in vogue in Wisconsin was dead wrong and he walloped President Wilson for taking a hand in the railway trainmen's threatened strike, for siding in favor of the railroad employees.

J. M. Clancey of Stoughton said there were too many jobholders in the state capitol. Harry W. Bolens roasted Senator La Follette. In fact the ghost of Senator La Follette seemed to be ever present in the little banquet hall and the speakers could not help taking a shot at him.

YEAR'S HARVEST AND FARMSTEAD BURN IN AN HOUR

John Richmond's Farm in Campbell Devastated by Flames Today

Grain and Stock Burn
Hired Man Painfully Seared by Flames in Saving Horses

In one hour from the time a tongue of flame was discovered licking around the eaves of John Richmond's big barn in the town of Campbell Monday morning, Mr. Richmond and his neighbors were standing before a pile of smouldering cinders, computing that the loss of two barns, a chicken house, a granary, most of a harvest, chickens and cattle amounts to $20,000. The Richmond home was saved by hard work of a bucket brigade of neighbors.

It was believed today that some of the children, playing in the hay-loft of the largest of the two barns, caused the fire. No other possible cause was discovered. The fire broke out at 11:45, and by one o'clock the farmstead was in ruins. It is located on the East French Island road.

More than a thousand bushels of oats, a large quantity of rye and hay, and two big strawstacks—almost a year's entire harvest—went up in smoke in spite of all efforts. Only a covering of blankets, kept constantly wet down by the bucket brigade, saved the house from going. A bull and calf of large value, and all of the chickens, were burned.

George Schultz, farm hand, was severely burned on both hands and arms in leading the horses from the blazing barn. Both members were terribly burned. Schultz was rushed to a doctor.

The buildings were valued at $14,000.

EIGHT HOUR DAY WITH PERIOD FOR PROBE IS PLAN

Lane, the president's confidential adviser in the cabinet, throughout Sunday afternoon. The president was informed that legislation such as he had in mind could be put through congress at this session.

To assist in settlement, should a strike arise, a bill increasing the membership of the interstate commerce commission from seven to nine members with authority to divide into groups, is practically agreed to.

Ready for Strike

Significance was seen today in announcement on the floor of the senate by Senator Kern, democratic floor leader, that it would be impossible for the senate to get through with its program by Friday, as planned. Considering the president's undoubted purpose to go to congress if negotiations fail, it is believed the Kern announcement is directly linked with the present rail crisis.

Also, significance was seen in arrangements by President Wilson to go to the capitol at 4 o'clock to confer with members of the steering committee of the senate. It was stated that the purpose of the visit was to thoroughly discuss developments in the strike situation.

Representatives of the railroad brotherhoods at a mass meeting on Sunday appointed a subcommittee of twenty-four to continue or end negotiations with President Wilson and the railroad managers. The remainder of the trainmen's representatives left immediately to prepare for strike orders should no settlement be reached. In case of the failure of negotiation a strike has already been agreed upon, according to trainmen officials. The hour is reported to be Friday or Saturday.

Skilled Men Scarce

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—Operating heads of western railroads admitted Monday they were making strenuous efforts to enlist strikebreakers in case the brotherhoods declare a strike, but so far with very indifferent results. Skilled railroad operators are very hard to obtain, while unskilled men are almost as difficult, owing to their employment as guards and strikebreakers, in Minnesota ore fields, where a strike is on, and to the employment of a large number of men usually available for guards of ammunition plants.

POLICE ALARMED FEARING RAID ON DENTAL OFFICES

Discovery of an unidentified man tampering with the lock of Dr. T. H. McGovern's office in the Stirneman block on Main street, caused the police to visit every dental office in the city Sunday evening, fearful of another raid like one a year ago, in which half a dozen dentists were robbed of gold and other valuables. No offices were found to have been touched, although the door of Dr. E. E. Burritt in the Majestic building had marks of a "jimmy" about the lock.

The man Dr. McGovern discovered at his door ran when the dentist appeared.

Miss Thimmisch was evidently confused and, it is said, walked into the machine. One wheel of the car passed over her. Her clothing was badly torn by the accident.

HE WAS A RED CROSS UNIT ALL BY HIMSELF SAYS MAN FROM WAR ZONE

Refusing to take service with any European government because the officials insisted that he serve only the wounded of that nationality, Frank W. Holslag played a lone hand on the battlefields of Europe and was eventually forced out of Europe as a suspect. Mr. Holslag, who is in chautauqua work, left La Crosse this noon.

"I saw service with the German, French, English, Belgian and Austrian armies," said Mr. Holslag when interviewed, "passing frequently from one army to another. I was not officially connected with any organization, but I went to Europe to serve the wounded men of all countries as best I could. When I found that the governments would not permit me to use their supplies for enemy wounded, I purchased what supplies I could and started to work in the field."

"How did you come to transfer so frequently?"

"I just drifted around," said Mr. Holslag. "Sometimes I would be working in the field and the organization I was with would be forced back, leaving me alone with the wounded. Then what they called the enemy would come up in their places and find me there. Usually I was arrested at once. I found a great difference in individual officers—sometimes, when I explained my purpose I was released at once, and other times I was imprisoned."

Mr. Holslag was finally deported as a suspect on a French torpedo boat destroyer, then transferred to an English cruiser, then to an English floating prison, and finally sent back to the United States.

WILLIAM H. HATTON, NEW LONDON, WIS.
Progressive Candidate for the Republican Nomination for Governor.

500 LEADERS IN CONFERENCE TO UNITE THE VOTE OF PROGRESSIVES

In the 1914 campaign the progressive vote was divided among five candidates for governor. In that campaign the conservatives were united on a single candidate. The inevitable result was the nomination of a reactionary, who received less than one-third of the republican vote cast at the primaries.

To prevent a repetition of the folly of dividing the progressive vote, 500 progressive leaders, representing every section and county of the state, signed a call for a conference which should recommend to the progressives of the state candidates for all the state offices.

Nearly 400 delegates attended that conference. These included supporters of former Governor McGovern and State Senator Otto Bosshard, both of whom had announced their candidacies for the republican nomination for governor previous to the calling of the conference. In this conference three ballots were taken on the governorship, and Mr. McGovern, Mr. Bosshard, Mr. Sanborn, and Mr. Hatton were voted for. Upon the third ballot Mr. Hatton was endorsed by a vote more than twice as great as that of all the other candidates combined.

Thereupon the Honorable Walter D. Corrigan, a leading McGovern supporter, arose and moved that the endorsement of Mr. Hatton for governor be made unanimous. In supporting this motion Mr. Corrigan made the following ringing speech:

Mr. Chairman: I understand, Mr. Chairman, that the result of this, the third ballot of this convention, on the question of who shall be nominated for governor, shows that Honorable William H. Hatton has received more than two-thirds of the votes of this conference, and therefore, under the rule which requires a two-thirds vote to nominate on any ballot prior to the fourth, Mr. Hatton is the nominee of this convention. That being the situation, I desire, as one of those who has consistently, throughout the balloting, voted for another candidate to move that the nomination of Honorable William H. Hatton, be made unanimous. (Great applause.)

Upon the motion being seconded from various parts of the hall, Mr. Corrigan said:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the convention: Before my motion is put by our distinguished chairman, I desire to be briefly heard in support of it.

Was For McGovern I have consistently voted in this convention for Honorable Francis E. McGovern. He has received the solid vote of the Milwaukee delegation upon every ballot. He has been defeated, and Honorable William H. Hatton has been made the nominee of this convention. (Applause.)

Mr. Hatton has been fairly nominated. (Applause.) I am sufficiently familiar with the history of this conference, from its inception until now, to know that it has been, and is a fair, honestly constituted body. No one can honestly gainsay this. It has brought together as representative a body of Progressive Republicans of Wisconsin as has ever assembled in this state in conference or convention. (Applause.) I believe that this conference represents that great body of Progressive Republican voters of Wisconsin who have, by their unswerving loyalty to the principles of representative government, made this state what it is today, the brightest star in the constellation of governments of the civilized world. (Great applause.) They have made Wisconsin the best place on earth in which to live. They have stood and stand today, in favor of government of, by, and for the people. They are unselfishly loyal to the cause of better government and have the profound hope that they may hand down to their posterity those blessings which our forefathers so wisely conceived and propounded for us.

Strong Leaders In this great Progressive movement, started twenty years ago, in this state, we have had many leaders. Some of them have been so great that through their power and influence, with the aid of the great progressive army of voters, Wisconsin has been put in the front rank among the states of this union, so much for several years, last past, that every state of this union has looked to Wisconsin until today we are recognized as first and foremost by educators, statesmen and other men of learning throughout the land, and throughout the world. (Applause.)

Proud of Wisconsin We have much to be proud of here in Wisconsin. We still have more to be thankful for if we can preserve this heritage for those who are to follow after us. We have been proud of the

What William Allen White Says About La Follette

(Editorial from Emporia (Kas.) Gazette)

"The election of a president is no more distinctly a national matter than the re-election of Senator Robert La Follette in Wisconsin. For no public official in the White House, on the Supreme bench or in Congress in a generation has been more truly and worthily a national public servant than Senator La Follette. No section, no class, no state, no cult or creed or even party has been able to win his support as a United States senator, away from a broad, courageous, intelligent conception of the duty to this whole nation. His record vote is a guide in the Senate to the brave, wise statesmanlike course in every crisis. Robert M. La Follette is by odds, the biggest man in the United States Senate. He has seen more of his demands met, more of his ideals realized, more of his plans mature into reality than any other senator who has been in public life in this generation.

"Moreover, he has seen these demands met, ideals realized and plans mature, not by sitting idly by and hoping, but by fighting with all the ardor of a crusader and all the intelligence of a trained political general. With a record of political victories his career has been and not once has chance favored him. Every fight has been won upon its merits, after a fierce contest. He has hit the enemy line at its strongest point and has gone through. So he is battle scarred and weighted with enemies. But his enemies are his best recommendation. His scalps are his laurels.

"For not once has he ever lined up with special privilege. Always has he been fighting for more equitable economic conditions for the people; always has he stood for broader and more democratic control of this government. The aristocracy of organized, aggrandized wealth and of crafty political plutocracy knows Senator La Follette for its uncompromising foe. It never sleeps. It is after him now. His fall will mean a triumph of money and privilege in America.

"Of course it will not fight fair—this secret power that stalks in every state seeking to sweep brave clean men from politics. Senator La Follette will have to meet lies; he will have to fight against half truths twisted into vicious falsehoods. He will have to stand against malice posing as patriotism, and he will have to combat not merely open bribery, but corruption masking as state pride and national honor.

"Yet he will win. The good sense and good judgment of the people of Wisconsin has been too often tried to admit of a doubt. And when he wins—what a victory it will be—not merely for Wisconsin but for America!"

leaders who have led this fight. We have learned to love all of them. It may be truthfully said that it is known amongst all honest men who know the truth that the man who has been first and foremost among the leaders of this great fight is our senior senator, Robert M. La Follette, now recognized by the best thinkers of his age, as the most comprehensive, farseeing, reformer and statesman of his time. (Great applause.) We love him for what he has done for our state and for us, and has done for our state and is doing, for our children. We love him for the place he has won for Wisconsin. We love him for his unselfish devotion to land for his profound sacrifices, for the great cause of Progressive government everywhere. (Great applause.) We, who have voted consistently for Francis E. McGovern admire and love him for the service he has rendered to the Progressive cause in Wisconsin, but we none the less, admire and love Honorable William H. Hatton, who has given years of thought and service to this great cause of ours. (Applause.) While we love and admire these great leaders of ours, we have come together here in this conference assembled more to attest our loyalty to the principles which Progressive Republicanism stands for. We are for principle first and men after. (Great applause.)

U. S. SENATOR, ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE, MADISON, WIS.
Candidate for Re-election on Republican Ticket at the Primaries Sept. 14th.

into our books by the popular will of the Progressive citizenship of this state shall not be repeated; that Progressivism shall not be a lost cause; that this state shall not be turned over body and soul to the corporate interests who, marching under a false flag pretending that the high cost of government is due to the promulgation of Progressive principles, are seeking day and night to misdirect the electorate of the state of Wisconsin with the view and purpose of aggrandizing the corporate and big business interests with the power to rule and ruin the state and its people. They are insidiously planning to write into the statute books laws which will grant to them their "special privileges," and laws which will again make our state as reactionary as it was before the people concluded to take control of their government and make the will of the people the supreme law of the land.

With these primary purposes in mind, and loyal to the great principles which our great cause represents, we come here today to nominate a candidate for governor. We want most of all one candidate. That is why we are in conference assembled. That is why we come here to talk the thing over together, to reconcile our immaterial differences as to men, to counsel together and find one man for whom all Progressives can stand, that we may meet our common foe, big business in politics, on an equal footing.

Favorite Candidates We have all had our favorite candidate. We have voted for him; we have discussed his candidacy with others who are here assembled. We have placed his cause before you. We have counseled with you today. We must go away from this convention now, when our work is done, of one mind. Each and every one of us must highly resolve that the battle in behalf of the nominee of this convention, must start tonight, and must not stop until the foes of popular government have been overwhelmed at the polls at our September primary. (Applause.) We cannot afford to carry any personal fight further. It is not so important that McGovern should be the nominee, or that Hatton should be the nominee, or that someone else should be the nominee, as it is that some one Progressive republican should be elected to be the standard bearer of Progressive Republicanism for the time being and in this campaign. And this conference has by more than a two-thirds vote, now declared that Honorable William H. Hatton shall be that man. (Great applause.) I declare myself for him from this moment on. Notwithstanding I have voted for another, and have favored another consistently, I am for the candidate I voted for no longer. Mr. McGovern, Mr. Bosshard, Mr. Sanborn and all the other candidates and their respective friends should go out of this convention and forthwith enter the ranks as privates. (Applause.) They should fight just as hard, and I believe they are all loyal enough to the cause to fight, and fight hard.

Mere defeat here is but the defeat of a man. To name a single candidate here is a victory for all of us. I ask these men who honestly voted with me here, for any candidate who has been here defeated, and who came to this convention to serve the cause of Progressive Republicanism, to go out of here tonight with the resolution set in their hearts that they will carry the battle of Progressive Republicanism through the valleys and over the hills of Wisconsin, with the conviction that they can best serve that cause today and in this campaign, by fighting for, and voting for the nominee of this convention. Honorable William H. Hatton. (Great applause.) We should send the word out over the wires tonight, that we are all Progressive Republicans; that we are for the principles of Progressive Republicanism because we love our state and our country, and because we believe these principles will best serve our government for this and future generations. Because we believe that the will of the people should be the supreme law of the land; because we believe Wisconsin should keep her place in the first and foremost rank of the civilized governments of the world. The news should be heralded broadcast over this land and to other states and nations who are bowed down beneath the weight and heel of big business politics, that Wisconsin stands out still as the shining light to guide them to the way of better government and better things. Let the news go out that the Progressive Republicans of Wisconsin are united once more. That they are united because they stand for principles first, upon which there has never been any division, and for men afterward. (Applause.)

Conclusion Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the convention, these are some of the reasons which move me to ask those who have voted with me in this convention, and those who have voted for any candidate other than Mr. Hatton, to join with me in making this great Progressive leader, this able and comprehensive statesman, Honorable William H. Hatton, the unanimous nominee of this convention. (Great applause.)

Let us take back the word to the hosts of Progressive Republicans of Wisconsin who have sent us here to do their work—that we have felt the beating of the pulse—and have appreciated the loyalty of their approving hearts—in doing the great work we were sent here to do.

They will finish the work we have begun, and make the restoration of representative government complete and everlasting in Wisconsin. (Great applause.)

THE RUNAWAYS

BY LOUISE OLIVER

(Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
John Hobson stopped in the shadow of the hedge and put on his shoes. Then, looking furtively back at his own darkened house and toward the dim outlines of houses that belonged to his neighbors, and assuring himself that his flight was unnoticed, he crept closely down the gravel path toward the street. An eyewitness would have declared he was running away.

and the eyewitness would have been correct.

John Hobson was running away. He could stand it no longer, and, having been harassed beyond endurance for the past few days because his wife had taken it into her head that she must have an electric motor, he had taken the count and quit.

But, although John was retreating from trouble, it was only temporary. He meant to come back. But not before he had given Henrietta the scare of her life. He had been too good to her, he saw it all now. He had spoiled her when they were married by giving in to her pouting and crying and new hats and gold mesh bags. Now, deciding that the price of eternal peace came too high, he determined to try another method of restoring her amiability. Besides, restoring had written that alumni week was going to be a big affair and urged his attendance. So, after all, he was only doing what he had a perfect right to do, he argued to himself, and French leave wasn't such an awful crime. Anyway, Henrietta would have insisted, had she known, that his car fare and expenses would pay weeks of garage bills for the new motor she wanted, so he hadn't dared to cheap.

Just over the hedge, parallel to his own path, ran the gravel walk of the Crinkles. And John, picking his way gingerly to avoid disturbing the tiny stones, suddenly heard a stealthy movement that was not of his own making. Instantly he divined it to be on the Crinkles' walk. Who could be sneaking around his neighbor's property at three o'clock in the morning? Not Billy surely, for Billy had no cause to resort to subterfuge so far as his wife was concerned. John sighed as he thought of Mrs. Billy's perfection. If only Henrietta could or would cultivate her angelic disposition. In fact, he had suggested such a course once too often and he no longer dared to mention the rare avis next door.

Crk! There it was again! John tiptoed close to the hedge and looked over. Could he believe his eyes? Billy Crinkle was certainly sneaking down the path toward the street and the dim starlight was enough to assure his observer that the dark thing he carried was a traveling bag.

"Great guns! Billy's running away! Now what do you suppose he means? I'm perfectly sure that if Maud Crinkle knew what he was doing she would only smile and say: 'Billy's such an old dear! Let him alone. What he does never worries me.' What Henrietta would have to contribute he dared not think about.

He stopped for a minute to let Billy have the lead. Out on the street he let his neighbor get a half block ahead.

The night express did not stop at their own station. The borough next to theirs was the stop, and a walk of a mile.

"Billy's making for Marshalltown same as I am, by Jove, and he's skipping on the 3:45, I'll bet a doughnut. He walked a little faster behind his friend.

"Hello, there! That you, Billy?" he called.

Billy stopped. "Hello, John! What on earth are you doing here at this hour of the night?"

"Same as you, I guess. Going east on the 3:45?"

"You guessed right."

There was silence. Neither dared to express surprise at his neighbor's choice of trains when no less than six expresses stopped there during civilized hours. The best train of all stopped at 10 p. m.

"Decided at the last minute to join the boys," explained John finally.

"So did I," laughed Billy nervously. "I never thought of you going, or I might have mentioned it. But I'm awfully glad, old fellow!" heartily. John thought he detected sympathy.

into my head she was right. And so I started packing at midnight and here I am."

"Uh um," Billy acknowledged doubtfully.

The two men strode along in silence for a minute, the houses and trees looming dark and ghostly in the chilling mist of very early morning.

Billy Crinkle found it hard to explain his surreptitious departure, for he was only guilty of seeking a sensation. He knew Maud would not only have consented to his trip, but would have driven him mad with affectionate little attentions prior to his departure. She would have packed his bag with everything he needed just when and where he wanted them. She would have forgotten nothing, his favorite shirts and ties and socks, the magazines he liked, cigars, flask, safety razor and stomach pills.

"Well," he broke the silence. "I might as well tell you why I came at this hour of the night. I was afraid if I'd suggest coming Maud would just raise general bedlam. So, as I didn't want to worry her, I slid. See?"

John stopped short in his tracks. "Look here, Bill, that's hard to swallow. I can't imagine Mrs. C. being anything but a perpetual dyed-in-the-wool angel. I don't believe she could get mad!"

"Mad? Your Henrietta isn't one, two, three to her when her temper's up."

"Henrietta! What do you mean? I never knew anyone with a more balanced disposition. She's the sweetest, most amiable girl you can imagine, and if she hadn't been the prize, she is she'd have left a miserable hot-tempered scallawag like me long ago. Humph!" snorted John.

"Excuse me!" sighed Billy. The fact was he could hardly understand his neighbor's sudden fury. Secretly he had always envied him Henrietta's disposition. If only Maud would go off at a tangent sometimes so he could coax her back! If she'd only fight so they could kiss and make up. Anything to take away the deadly monotony of perfection!

They turned a corner and the bright light of the station loomed ahead.

The two men entered the waiting room just as the hands of the big electric clock pointed to five minutes of train time.

Nothing would have been wanting. But as it was he hefted his bag from one hand to the other with a sort of savage joy, knowing that he has packed the conglomeration it contained in two minutes and a half by his stop watch and got in everything he didn't need and nothing that he did.

In plain words, Billy was tired of perfection and affection. He hoped by a few days of anxiety on Maud's part to receive the thorough rating he deserved when he came back—anything but eternal, smiling affection.

"Well," he broke the silence. "I might as well tell you why I came at this hour of the night. I was afraid if I'd suggest coming Maud would just raise general bedlam. So, as I didn't want to worry her, I slid. See?"

John stopped short in his tracks. "Look here, Bill, that's hard to swallow. I can't imagine Mrs. C. being anything but a perpetual dyed-in-the-wool angel. I don't believe she could get mad!"

They turned a corner and the bright light of the station loomed ahead.

The two men entered the waiting room just as the hands of the big electric clock pointed to five minutes of train time.

But John was thinking of other things than the time and made no effort to purchase his ticket. It occurred to him that he had more than half meant what he had said to Billy. "I suppose it has been my fault mostly," he argued. "I'll bet I am hard to get along with, and here I've been putting the blame on Henrietta. Besides, I'd as soon get sick and tired of her if she was always the same, like Maud Crinkle!"

"Billy! I'm going home," he suddenly declared. "I'm not feeling very well!"

And Billy, suddenly realizing that Maud might discover his absence and worry herself sick, said eagerly: "Then I'm not going a step either. I'll not desert you now."

And when the big express thundered in, the two men might have been seen hurrying away into the dim vista of the sleeping suburb.
